
THE NEWSLETTER OF THE EARLY SLAVIC STUDIES ASSOCIATION

Vol. 17, No. 1-2 (Nov. 2004) http://clover.slavic.pitt.edu/~essa/index.html

Message from the President

Greetings, ESSA members,

Once again we are anticipating the annual meetings of AAASS and ESSA. It appears that despite the change in the dates of the meetings from November to early December with the result that some of our members will be unable to attend, Early Slavic Studies will be well represented. The seemingly inevitable scheduling problems are once again evident; nevertheless the preliminary program promises a stimulating set of panels on topics relating to our fields.

The ESSA business meeting should also be an exciting one. According to the preliminary program, it will take place at 8:00 am on Monday, December 6. A central item on the agenda is the presentation of the First Annual Prize for Scholarly Literature in Early Slavic Studies. This year's prize is for early Slavic texts (analysis, edition, and/or translation). David Goldfrank, who chaired the selection committee formed at our last meeting, will make the presentation. I'd like to thank David and the committee members, Cynthia Vakareliyska, and Francis Butler, for their efforts and to encourage everyone to come to the meeting to honor the recipient(s).

Another item of important business is a special election to replace our Newsletter editor, Robert Romanchuk. After years of excellent service Robert is resigning the editorship in order to begin working on the editorial board of Polata Knigopisnaja. We therefore have to select someone to take over responsibility for the Newsletter for at least one year, until regular elections are held at our 2005 meeting. The other ESSA officers and I are acting as an ad hoc nominating committee and will submit a nominee for your approval at the meeting; nominees from the floor will also be welcome. I regret Robert's departure and on behalf of the entire ESSA extend our deep gratitude to him for performing this task so well for so long.

Finally, ESSA will be holding its annual banquet for members, family, and friends. Many thanks to Vice President David Miller, who has overseen the arrangements for this event. An announcement containing details about the dinner is below. David will also provide those details at our meeting.

I look forward to seeing many of you at the panel sessions, our meeting, and at the ESSA banquet. Until then, I extend my best wishes to you all.

Respectfully,
Janet Martin
President, ESSA

ESSA Dinner at Legal Seafood on Monday, Dec. 6

The ESSA dinner during the AAASS meeting in Boston will be on Monday evening, Dec. 6 at 6:00 pm at the Legal Seafood restaurant. Location is 26 Park Plaza (within walking distance of the hotel).

Please inform David Miller, <dbmjjm@rcn.com> if you will be attending, and how many there will be with you, so that he may inform the restaurant about the size of our party. Thanks go to Don Ostrowski for tracking down this excellent place for our dinner.

Best wishes,
David Miller

Call for Contributions for Volume on Russian History

Foundations of History: Medieval Russia, 860-1725 will be produced in 2005 by Pegasus Press, an academic press devoted to providing faculty and students of medieval and Renaissance studies with texts and supplementary works that will enhance teaching and learning.
This new compilation is intended as a diverse and thorough collection of texts on medieval Russian history, which can be used in undergraduate as well as graduate classes. To be produced in print -- and possibly electronic -- form, the sourcebook will cover the broad ranges of political, economic, social, and cultural development. There will be no restriction on subject matter within the area of medieval Russia.
Original translations of primary documents are requested. While length will not be a determining factor, the editors reserve the right to edit the selections. The project is being directed by Eve Levin, associate professor of Russian history at the University of Kansas and editor of The Russian Review; and by Karen Lemiski (Ph.D. Arizona State University), whose research interests are focused on the relations between medieval Russia and the Byzantine Empire.
Contributions or queries should be sent to Prof. Eve Levin, e-mail: evelevin@ku.edu or to Dr. Karen Lemiski, email: drmrts@hotmail.com
All submissions will receive prompt and informed consideration.
